STILL GOING STRONG

GEORGE C. Seward, who will turn 100 on Aug. 4, hugs his granddaughter Ashley Cole at a party held in his honor Tuesday night by the law firm that bears his name, Seward & Kissel, at the Down Town Association as Ms. Cole's parents, Mr. Seward's daughter Patricia Liddle and her husband Dryden Liddle, look on. As senior counsel to the firm the Nebraska native joined in 1953, Mr. Seward continues to commute from Scarsdale to his downtown Manhattan office at One Battery Park Plaza, where he usually answers the phone on the first ring and cultivates his abiding interest in business law. At right, he shares a moment in his office with Paula Huffell, his secretary and watchful gatekeeper for more than 32 years.
